Painting & Camaraderie

During the first year of COVID summer, some painters were fortunate enough to meet outdoors on occasion with Plein Air Washington Artists (PAWA). When the weather changed to winter, seven women from the group of local painters found camaraderie via weekly Zoom sessions, fueling inspiration and boosting morale during the quarantine.

Since then, they have had many paint-outs and group shows. This exhibit is their collaboration of friendship in art. The feeling is that "art is a journey of exploration and expressions, unique to each one of us." Therefore, you will find that each artist here compliments the others, but in her own style.

The Artists

Joanne Onorato

"I Paint to paint. I learn from the masters and create work that is both my realism and abstraction. I strive to use focal light, color combinations, and textural contrast to tell a story."

Gigi Godfrey

"As an oil painter, I am drawn to subjects displaying some sort of rhythm. My work is characterized by defined brushstrokes, texture, and harmonized color. Painting has been a passion, a curiosity, a chase. There is always more to explore, more to see, more to interpret with paint."

Wendy Armstrong

My passion is to build and create. Starting with raw materials and generating something functional or visually appealing, regardless of size or medium, has provided me with challenges and learning opportunities that have enhanced my life.

Fatima Young

"On location I study nature and simplify it. My goal is always to capture the freshness and rhythm found in majestic landscapes."

Diana Benjamin

Diana C. Benjamin lives on Bainbridge Island, Washington. She describes her work as expressionistic and paints en plein air and in-studio, using her own photography, imagery, and still life, as composition.

Nora Masters

"My paintings are my reflections of nature. For me, painting is a response to being alive. I paint from life focusing on expressing the light, atmosphere and emotion at the time."

Tannis Moore

Tannis' art is inspired by and created in times of personal peace and reflection. Light, strong value contrasts and color are what intrigue and draw her attention. Her medium of choice is oil, but she also creates with watercolor, gouache, pen and graphite.
